Snoqualmie Valley Health Named to Becker's 2025 List of Great Community Hospitals

Snoqualmie Valley Health's Critical Access Hospital is located just off I-90 at Exit 25.

SNOQUALMIE, WA – Snoqualmie Valley Health has been named one of Becker's Hospital Review's 2025 Great Community Hospitals, a national recognition honoring healthcare organizations that deliver exceptional care, foster deep community ties, and lead with innovation in non-urban settings.

Becker's highlighted Snoqualmie Valley Health's recent growth and advancements, noting the organization's commitment to improving rural healthcare access through strategic service expansion and community partnership. Specifically, the publication recognized:

- The launch of new services including low-dose CT lung screening, 3D mammography, and 24/7 trauma-informed services for survivors of interpersonal violence.
- Telemetry system upgrades that have improved care for medically complex patients while reducing the need for transfers.
- The hospital's consistent ranking in the top 10% for patient satisfaction among critical access hospitals in Washington.

- Strong community engagement, with recent awards including Best Community Partner from the Snoqualmie Valley Regional Chamber and top fundraising recognition from the Rural Health Collaborative.
- The groundbreaking of a new ambulatory expansion, designed to unify and expand outpatient care offerings in the Valley.

“This recognition truly belongs to our team,” said Renée K. Jensen, CEO of Snoqualmie Valley Health. “We’re proud of the innovation, compassion, and dedication our staff brings to work every day. Being included on this list reflects our ongoing commitment to keeping care local, advancing health equity, and serving this community with heart.”

Snoqualmie Valley Health, an independent public hospital district, provides comprehensive healthcare to the Snoqualmie Valley and surrounding region through its critical access hospital, two primary care clinics, urgent care, and a wide range of specialty services. From emergency services to outpatient specialties, SVH continues expanding access while delivering personalized, high-quality care close to home.
